Market Review

Markets ended the first half of the year on a very positive note, with most asset classes performing well in June. Bonds and equities reacted positively to major central banks turning dovish to counter growth slowdown and fading inflation. Towards the second half of the month, renewed hope for a market-friendly outcome to trade negotiations between the US and China added another booster to more risky asset classes.

All major equity indices rose, with the S&P500 (+6.9%) and MSCI emerging markets (+5.7%) outperforming the rest (+4.3% for Stoxx Europe 600 and +2.6% for the Japanese TOPIX).

Most government bond yields tumbled, including both core (German 10Y -13 bps to -0.33%, US 10Y -12 bps to 2.01%) and periphery countries (Spain 10Y -32 bps, Italy -57 bps). Corporate bonds performed similarly, in the wake of the equity rally. Investment Grade bonds increased by 1.58% (Bloomberg Barclays EUR Corporates IG) with hybrid and subordinated debt outperforming senior one.

After its selloff in May, Oil prices rebounded in June with the WTI contracts rising 9% as markets anticipated OPEC+ to extend its production cap for another 9 months.

Gold was the big performer of June, rising 8%.

Portfolio Performance

The fund advanced 2.95% during the month, benefiting from both rising equities and bonds. Some exposure, both to equity markets as to bond duration, has even been added during the first half of the month. Duration of the fixed income part of the fund was increased from 5.4 to 5.9, while equities exposure reached an all-time high of over 49%. The fund also benefited from the rising gold price through an exposure to goldmining companies added recently.

Market Outlook

Investors have been receiving conflicting signals lately. Global equity markets have made new highs but interest rate futures suggest the Federal Reserve will cut rates by almost 100bps in the next year. This is the opposite of late last year when US equities fell by 20% and the Fed hiked. One can simply “blame the Fed” for both last year’s sell-off and the recent bull run, but that ignores other major drivers of market action, including the trade wars, the manufacturing slump, and the popular but hardly ubiquitous view that the US economy is near the end of the cycle. Different perspectives can give wildly different judgments on the global economy at the moment. We see the following: households and firms in developed markets can borrow at exceptionally low rates, unemployment is low, labor income and profits are growing, and business cost pressures are visible but modest. Therefore, we maintain our high equity exposure, while also keeping our long duration profile as a damper against future shocks.
