Market Review

2019 finished with equities rising on signs of stabilization emerging from the manufacturing data both in Europe and in China and given a final boost by the possibility of a signature on a phase 1 US-China trade deal. Furthermore, Boris Johnson's conservative majority in the UK parliament has diminished the perceived risk of a no-deal Brexit. Abating concerns about such ongoing geopolitical uncertainties led to some complacency in global equity markets. Emerging Market (EM) equities surged by 7.2%, trying to catch up with Developed Market (DM) equities. The latter also performed well, with the S&P 500 adding another 2.9%, bringing its 2019 performance to a staggering +28.9%, well ahead of other DM. European stocks and Japanese stocks added respectively 2.1% and 1.3% to bring their 2019 performance to 23.2% and 15.2%.

In this risk-on environment, yields shifted higher and credit spreads tightened (IG -10 bps, HY -21 bps). The German 10Y yield increased by 18 bps to -0.19%. Eurozone government spreads tightened, with the exception of Italy which suffered from renewed political turmoil. Investment Grade corporate bonds declined by 0.05% impacted by the yield effect.

Overall, fixed income markets posted strong performances in 2019, supported by both lower yields and tightened spreads. EUR government bonds, IG and HY corporate bonds returned 6.77%, 7.06% and 9.55% respectively.

Oil prices surged by over 10% in December, among renewed trade optimism and an OPEC commitment to maintain its production cap beyond March 2020.

Interestingly, Gold prices surged as well, with the price for one troy ounce reaching 1517 at years end. Increasing tensions between the US and Iran are the most plausible explanation for this "safe haven" outperformance, while all other defensive assets performed rather poorly.

Portfolio Performance

The fund was up 1.01% in December, bringing its 2019 performance to +13.13%. The fund was well positioned to profit from last month's relief movements. Equity exposure was around 59% for the majority of the time, with an important exposure to outperforming US technology stocks. At the same time, the fixed income part of the fund benefited from its lower duration exposure, which stood around 4.5 at month's end. So, rising yields had only a minimal impact on the fund's performance.

Market Outlook

The prospect of a 'phase 1' trade-deal signing ceremony in early January, together with a dollop of relief in the ongoing Brexit saga, has placed global sentiment indicators squarely in 'extreme optimism' territory. Yet uncertainties still remain over the details of this deal (and later phases are unlikely to be dealt with over the short term) and there remains the ongoing risk of the negative sentiment in manufacturing spreading to the consumer. Geopolitical risk prevails (ie. US-Iran), which might lead to some sideways moves in equity markets. In this environment we continue to favour our growth exposure with a strong focus on US tech. That being said, our bond exposure is still largely tilted towards high quality and will remain so, albeit with no intention to increase duration.
