Market Review

Markets reacted positively to the improvement of the global economy that continued to recover from the coronavirus pandemic. The Eurozone composite PMI jumped by 6.4 pts m/m to 54.9 pts, above the 50 no-change mark for the first time since February. Indeed, despite a second wave taking shape around the globe, governments decided to implement targeted measures instead of lockdowns, which supported economic activity. Furthermore, the Fed announced a new strategy that will be even more dovish by allowing inflation to rise modestly above its 2% target for some time.

In this context, safe havens receded. The German 10Y yield increased by 13 bps to -0.40% and the yield curve steepened (2-30Y +10 bps). The US yield curve shifted even further (10Y +18 bps to 0.70%, 2-30Y +26 bps). Conversely, peripheral spreads tightened (Spain -6 bps, Italy -5 bps). Corporate bonds benefited from this economic momentum. As demonstrated by the equity rally, credit spreads tightened (IG-8 bps, HY -37 bps).

Portfolio Performance

The fund gained 1,01% in August. High yield bonds contributed the most, including Almaviva and Loxam that posted reassuring results. Subordinated bonds also posted good results (notably Santanter, VW, EDF and Eurofins). Investment grade performed moderately due to the negative yield effect, while selection was accretive (especially IMCD, Fedex and Ceetrus). Foreign currencies (USD, JPY) performed negatively due to the EUR strength.

During the month, we took advantage of the bond market's reopening to introduce new bonds (Vodafone Perp, Belden) that offered interesting relative value. We also reduced Italy after its good performance (country spread: -99 bps since May, to 149 bps).

Market Outlook

In our view, fiscal and monetary support coupled with selective measures to cope with a second wave are supportive to the economic activity. While valuations have normalized for the past six months, credit spreads remain attractive, especially in a context of low rates for longer. Therefore, we continue to focus on credit with a slight bias towards the high-yielding bonds (BBB, high yield) and maintained a moderate duration.
